

Biography Elin "Luffar Lo" Öberg

I am a harmonica player and songwriter from Stockholm in Sweden. I play the harmonica in the Root Rock band AMONG LYNX and in the all-female blues band Ladies Got the Blues. In addition to playing in the two bands, I just released my own YouTube Channel to introduce my solo project and to establish herself as a solo artist.

I have a passion for Roots music. I love playing traditional genres like blues, soul, funk, folk and jazz. When it comes to writing music I like to combine traditional genres with contemporary styles, like rock and pop. My band AMONG LYNX is a good example of that combination, where the dirty old Blues meets modern Pop/Rock.

I would describe my harmonica style as expressive and melodic, highly influenced by vocals. I like to think that the harmonica is just as colorful and striking as the lead vocals in a song. Above all, I try to work melodies and hooks, but also with dynamic phrases and rhythm as much as possible.

I've always had a passion for music - I started singing and playing the guitar as a kid, I've been studying music in school and at the University of Uppsala, but I've actually learned the most from playing with others and practising by myself.

When I was about 20 years old I decided to listen my way through modern rock/pop history and I started with American folk songs and early blues from the 1920-1930th century. That is when I fell in love with roots music - especially the blues. After hearing a slow blues by The Yardbirds from the 1960's i decided I wanted to learn how to play the harmonica. And so I did!
